

Teaching Generations to Care

Fall Newsletter

The Adirondack Park Institute (API) partnered with the creative and dedicated staff of the Adirondack Interpretive Center (AIC) in Newcomb to offer engaging summer programming to both locals and visitors of the Adirondack Park. Although some trails remain partially closed due to flooding in 2023, the beautiful Rich Lake Trail is still open and has been enjoyed by many.

While exploring the trails and taking in the beauty of the landscape, visitors also had the opportunity to encounter API-sponsored Artist-in-Residence Anicka Chaffey, as she worked on her craft and shared her insights with guests. Interpretive Naturalist Intern Karin Hoover was also on hand, leading guided walks, engaging with visitors daily, and producing content to share her observations with a wider audience.

Inside the Center, workshops, classes, lectures, and films were available, complementing the AIC's thoughtfully curated exhibits and historical displays that highlight the natural and cultural heritage of the Adirondack Park. Looking ahead to 2026, the AIC expects to complete the final 3.5 miles of trail repairs by the end of the summer, with the trails open for public use. The AIC staff is excited to celebrate this milestone with special events and tours in the coming seasons.

As the Friends group to the Adirondack Interpretive Center, the Adirondack Park Institute provides support for the Center's free educational and experiential programs that teach generations to care for the Adirondack Park's unique natural and cultural resources.

2025 Awards Gala

The Gala was held on September 21st at the historic Adirondack Hotel in Long Lake. Gala Co-chairs for the event were Joanie Mahoney, the President of SUNY ESF and John Ernst, Former President of the APA. Proceeds from this event fully fund free programs offered at the Adirondack Interpretive Center in Newcomb, NY.

The Frank & Jean Hutchins Environmental Education Leadership Award was presented to Ross Whaley

President Emeritus of the State University of New York College of Environmental Science and Forestry (SUNY ESF) and former Chair of the Adirondack Park Agency
Ross is a Director Emeritus of the Adirondack North Country Association, and past board member of ADKAction.org.

He makes his home in Michigan now, but has a long history of living on the shores of Upper Saranac in Tupper Lake and spent nearly 60 years as a leader in forestry and natural resource education. Among his many other positions in education and consulting, he has also served on several state government councils and task forces, and accepted consulting engagements throughout the world.
